Three-day International Conference on “Higher Education and Sustainable Development” from 23rd to 25th March 2023

Brief Report on
Three Day International Conference on Higher Education – Sustainable Development

I am pleased to present a report on the Three-Day Conference on "Higher Education and Sustainable Development". The conference was held over three days, was a grand success, bringing together National and International scholars from various academic fields. The conference started with a spectacular inaugural program, where the eminent speakers emphasized the importance of higher education in achieving sustainable development goals.

The conference's keynote speakers set the tone for the conference and delivered insightful speeches that captured the conference's theme. The technical sessions were designed to cover different aspects of higher education's role in sustainable development. The paper presentations were insightful, and they offered new perspectives and ideas on the subject.

The event witnessed the presentation of 187 research papers across 24 technical sessions, providing a platform for researchers and academicians to share their innovative ideas and best practices. The conference aimed to explore the role of higher education institutions in promoting sustainable development and finding solutions to the challenges faced by society. The conference was a great opportunity to exchange ideas, share knowledge, and discuss the challenges and opportunities for higher education in sustainable development.

Over the course of the conference, a total of 24 technical sessions were held, with 187 research papers presented on various themes related to the conference. The sessions covered a broad range of topics, including the role of innovation in Indian education, the transmission of indigenous knowledge systems, the impact of Covid-19 on higher education, and the globalisation of Indian higher education.

On Day 1, a total of eight technical sessions were held, with 79 research papers presented. Day 2 had 10 technical sessions, with 76 papers presented, including 21 papers presented online from various places across the nation and globe. On Day 3, six sessions were held, and 32 paper presentations were done.

The conference was a great success and provided a platform for scholars to exchange their ideas and research findings. The participants had the opportunity to engage in meaningful discussions, share best practices and learn from each other. The conference has contributed to the ongoing dialogue on the role of higher education in achieving sustainable development.

It is happy to share that, the conference organizers received positive feedback from the participants, who found the conference well-organized and fruitful. The conference created a platform for networking and collaboration among participants, which was one of the conference's objectives.

The conference proceedings will be published soon, and it is expected that they will make a significant contribution to the existing knowledge on the conference's theme. The conference has paved the way for further research and collaborations in the field of higher education and sustainable development.

In conclusion, the conference was a resounding success, and it brought together scholars, researchers, and practitioners from different parts of the world to share their knowledge, experiences, and ideas on the theme of "Higher Education as a Channel for Sustainable Development." The conference has provided a platform for further research and collaborations in this field, and it is expected that the outcomes of the conference will make a significant contribution to the existing knowledge in this field.

In conclusion, I would like to thank all the participants, keynote speakers, presenters, and attendees for their contributions to the conference's success. We look forward to your cooperation and participation in such futures endeavours to continue the tradition of dialogue and discussion.
